Abstract: From its founding in 1913, ASM International has had a rich history of service to the materials industry and engineering community. This presentation will trace the development of the Society from the early days as the Steel Treaters' Club, the Steel Treating Research Society, and the American Society for Steel Treating to the American Society for Metals and ASM International. An important milestone for the Society was the building of its innovative headquarters in Northeast Ohio. From the visionary design and construction through to its 50th Anniversary refurbishment and re-dedication as a National Historical Landmark, this unique landmark reflects the Society's creative direction and journey.

ASM is a member-led, volunteer-driven technical Society devoted to material science engineering. Our volunteers are the lifeblood of ASM. Their generous support is highly valued and necessary for the future of our Society. ASM is dedicated to informing, educating and connecting the materials community. To meet the needs of our members and member organizations, ASM offers a wide variety of products and services, and enhanced technical development and member connections.

In fulfillment of our Society's vision and mission and with the guidance of our Strategic Plan, ASM is charting the future of the Society. Today our world is dramatically different from even just the beginning of 2020. ASM is realistic about the challenges this time brings. We are focused on not only supporting our membership but seeking out the opportunities which will help us to thrive. Our Society is stepping up to face this new virtual world
